

SHINING A LIGHT ON OREGON'S HISTORY

HECETA HEAD LIGHTHOUSE

Oregon's Lighthouses are the sentinels of our rugged coastline. Originally built to welcome sailors and guide them safely into harbor, they continue to be a symbol of Oregon's ingenuity and hospitality. But time and the elements have taken their toll, and Oregon's lighthouses needed support to keep them standing.

Profits from the Oregon Lottery are helping to restore Oregon's historic lighthouses and preserve them for future generations. One of the most spectacular is the lighthouse at Heceta Head, located thirteen miles north of Florence on HWY 101. Not only is Heceta Head Lighthouse one of Oregon's most beautiful lighthouses, it also contains the most powerful marine light on the Oregon coast. At one time it had its own post office and one-room school house, and many people believe it is haunted.

All nine of Oregon's lighthouses have been named to the National Registry of Historic Places, and with the help of Oregon Lottery profits, seven are maintained as state parks that are open to the public.
