

KAM WAH CHUNG & CO. OVER 100,000 SERVED SINCE 1887

KAM WAH CHUNG HERITAGE CENTER

Located in John Day, Kam Wah Chung & Co. was the commercial, spiritual and cultural center of Oregon's Chinese population from 1887 to 1948. It was a general store, a post office, a library and temple. People came to shop, to socialize, to pray. Most importantly, they came to be treated by Doc Hay who was famous throughout Oregon as a master of Chinese herbal medicine.

In the 1900s, people traveled hundreds of miles for the goods and services they could only get at Kam Wah Chung. Today, thanks to support from the Oregon Lottery and Oregon State Parks, they come to step back in time.

Profits from the Oregon Lottery help fund the Kam Wah Chung Heritage Center, which is operated by a partnership between state parks, the City of John Day, and Friends of Kam Wah Chung. The Heritage Center preserves an important part of Oregon's history and helps to support the economy of Eastern Oregon by bringing tourists to John Day.

Over a hundred years since it was first founded, Kam Wah Chung continues to serve Oregon — both as a nationally-recognized historic landmark and as a vital part of the local economy. For more information on Kam Wah Chung, log on to oregonlottery.org
